

Artist Statement: Steve Burnett

I paint my hopes and fears. Some work is inspirational, some is deeply disturbed. I sold two pieces to a collector in Iowa. She wanted one for the room of her deceased father had called his own. It was full of his collections. And one for her own room which was full of her collections. The piece in her room was humorous. The other dark and dramatic. Both were appropriate for their place. It thrills me to have my work travel into all the places our hearts and minds create.

I have an organic farm. There's pattern language everywhere. There's light splashing over the same landscape endlessly renewing it. I don't know the artist well enough to name.